An envelope postmarked at Station E of New York Post Office, 465 Eighth avebetween Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth enclosing a letter directed to Jay Gould, was received by the editor of the Wall Street Daily North on Oct. 17. He was requested to give the letter to Mr. Gould in persommunicated its contents to Washington E. Connot, his broker. It was written in a disguised hand, with a disregard of punctuation that was intended to make it appear the composition of an ignorant person, but with no mistake in spelling. The letter was as follows: WINDSON HOPSE, Oct. 15, 1881.

THE DIACRMAILER INDIGNANT.

For some reason this last personal rendered "Victim" indignant. In a letter too long to be quoted he declared himself an ill-used man. He said that he had reason to expect a greater decline of stocks than there had been, especially in the Manhattan Elevaned and the other stock in which he had 'nve ted. He concluded with the declaration that Mr. Gould, who had been the original cause of his loss of fortune, had now, while pretending to aid him, caused him to lose more. A "personal" in Tuesday's Hernid made this repit:

M's RiknD-Vorr last is unjust. I warned you not took for further decline, also against the two you said you had. Why should you not trust we rather than ask me to trust you? I assure you that all you have my will have my aid cherrially given in the way I have named. This way of commandating is not quick enough to prevent accidents. I do not intend to desert you. BREAKING DOWN AFTER HIS ARREST.

The prisoner evinced the deepest distress when alone with Inspector Byrnes in the Inspector's private office. He cried like a child, and asked whether he could be confronted with Mr. Gould, saying that if he knew Mr. Gould would press the proceedings against him he would kill himself. When conducted to a cell he seen became chimer. He was locked up in one of the large and comfortably furnished cells across the main hall from the detectives' office. A uniformed policeman, detailed from the Mercer street station by Capt. Brogan, watched him to guard against any attempt at self-destruction. The prisoner's dinner was ordered from a hotel restaurant on Broadway, and he ate heartily and with apparent relish. Of a large porterhouse steak nothing but the bone remained, and a liberal supply of vegetables and other accompaniments were caten, and two pots of coffee were drained. No one was any information concerning his behavior to be had of his watchers.

About 11 occurs two gentlemen arrived at headquarters in a carriage. They asked to be portuited to see in tak to the prisoner, nor a haver. In the sheare of the prisoner of them has perfected in the morning.

I don't believe he is right in his head. When he was first locked up he waiked nervously up and down, but had become quiet long before his super was brought in, about 9 o'clock. He ate very heartily, and when he had fineshed he sat for fully ten minutes starting at a piece of bread about as big as a half dollar which he held in his hand. Then he took off his coat and vest and sat down, resting his clower on his vest and sat down, resting his clower on his while he would straighten up and ruses his hands, with the paims together, up to a level with his head, and had them there for a moment. About 10 o'clock he throw himself down on the outside of the bed without removing any more of his clothing. seated around a covered bulliard table listening attentively to impressive remarks from grayhatred Michael Gonza, manager of the cushioncarrom billiard tournament which is to begin from that quarter, the policeman continued his round, and Mr. Geary went on with his epeech. Gentlemen, he said, an important point to be considered in the coming tournament is, that it will be necessary for every man to play his very best in every game. Even if any player should win no games up to his last, he should pay that last game with all his skill and power. He should play it as well as if on that game depended his carrying off the first brike. In no other way can you do nistice to vourselves, to your fellow players, and to the product.

"Another point that is not generally understood" continued Mr. Geary, is the fact that the winner of his tournament will be the man should be Mr. Books to accompany him to haropa to hance a match with Victoria. Many have believed that Mr. Schiefer has been fixed upon for that match. For such is not the case, I amy man proved himself a cetter player than Mr. Schiefer he would be the man chosen."

All the contestants were present, namely: George F. Susson, William Sexton, Jasob Schaefer Joseph Dion, Thomas J. Gellamber, Marries Italy, tagens carter, John Hamielph Heiser, Alondo H. Morris, and Thomas Walhace. None of them dissended from the spirit of Mr. Geary's remarks, and all acteed to leave the arranging of the order in which the men should play in his hands.

At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Geary said: "Gentiemen, Mr. Roche has his handed me the $2,500 to be payed for. The winners will ce't it from me." "It ake mine now," said Mr. Sexton.

GUITEAU'S TRIAL

The Prisoner to Attempt to Make a State-WASHINGTON, Nov. 13 .- The trial of Guiteau will begin here to-morrow in the Criminal Court. Mr. George Scoville, Guiteau's counsel, said this evening that his client had insisted that it should be his prerogative to make a statement in court to-morrow, and that Guiteau has been engaged for the past ten days in preparing a statement setting forth his views, which he will probably present as soon as the court opens to-morrow unless prevented by Judge opens to-morrow unless prevented by Judge Cox.

Mr. Scoville said to-night that it was not the intention of counsel for the defence to intrude technical objections in selecting a jury. They will endeavor to obtain a jury composed of men capable of rendering a fair verdict after hearing the evidence, and who will not be carried away by public clamor, against their convictions.

Mr. John W. Guitenu of Boston and his sister, Mrs. Scoville, visited their brother at the jail here this afternoon. The interview lasted nearly two hours. The prisoner betrayed no unusual emotion at the meeting, and, after exchanging salutations, began the recital of the old story as to the causes which prompted him to commit the crime with which he is charged. He expressed no regret whatever for his action, but reiterated his previous story about being "inspired by God."
